Mandela: socialist and lawyer

Plus: Legal aid; IPCC; Frances Webber on Citizenship; Basques; Richard Harvey on the Arctic 30; Brazil; Levellers and more
News & comment Radical lawyering in practice; ‘Hands up if you’re a spy’; Socialists sleepless in Seattle; ELDH activities; squatters under attack

Shackles of misery Paramjit Ahluwalia looks at the Government’s new Modern Slavery bill

Citizenship Frances Webber analyses this Government’s protection of human rights and, by looking at two important UK cases, worries for the future for British Muslims

Activating the ‘equality of arms’ Daniel Newman spent a year observing lawyers and has vital conclusions for the future of criminal justice, while Siobhán Lloyd outlines our response to the consultation on advice and legal support

Nelson Mandela, socialist and lawyer was rightly honoured in December 2013 following his death after a long period of ill-health, writes Steven Walker

Red ink from the Eastern Cape Jenny Morgan on the South African artist and anti-apartheid fighter Norman Kaplan who spent 14 years in Britain

The poetry of Brian Turner with photography by Gilbert van Reenen

Rio Pardo Júlio Moreira shows that the brutal treatment of peasants reveals the true nature of Brazil today

The odyssey of the Arctic 30 Richard Harvey on the Greenpeace activists charged with piracy

Is the IPCC fit for purpose? Daniela Tringale on the Independent Police Complaints Commission

Spain guilty of violating Basque human rights Iratxe Urizar reports on an important European Court ruling

Guantánamo Marjorie Cohn on the 155 detainees facing continued violations of legal principles

The Levellers David Watkinson looks back at the battles for democracy over 350 years ago

Reviews The Speech; Investigated or ignored?; Black Star: Britain’s Asian Youth Movements; Shadow Lives – The Forgotten Women of the War on Terror