Notes for Authors

Manuscripts (as WORD attachments) should be sent to: d.bourn@ioe.ac.uk

Articles should be original. Should any material overlap with material which the author has published elsewhere in another language other than English, this should be made clear when the article is submitted. All articles will be refereed by members of the editorial board and other internationally renowned academics, which may lead to suggestions for the improvement of the article. The author’s final draft will be edited and corrected by the journal’s final editor.

Main articles should be between 3,000 and 8,000 words, including abstracts and referencing. An abstract of 80-120 words in English should be provided at the beginning of the article. It is recommended that an outline of a proposed article is sent in advance of submitting the article.

Authors should prepare and send two versions of their manuscript. One should be a complete text, including author details and short professional biographies of each author, while in the second all document information identifying the author should be removed from files to allow them to be sent anonymously to referees.

Book review queries should be addressed to: d.bourn@ioe.ac.uk

Tables and captions to illustrations. Tables and captions to illustrations must be typed out on separate sheets and not included as part of the text. The captions to illustrations should be gathered together and also typed out on a separate sheet. Tables and figures should be numbered in Arabic numerals. The approximate position of tables and figures should be indicated in the manuscript. Captions should include keys to symbols.

Figures. Please supply one set of artwork in a finished form suitable for reproduction. Figures will not normally be withdrawn by the Publisher.

Reference style and format. A full explanation of the style and referencing for the articles is available on www.trentham-books.co.uk

References should be indicated in the typescript by giving the author’s name, with the year of publication in parenthesis. If several papers by the same author and from the same year are cited, a, b, c, etc. should be put after the year of publication. The references should be listed in full, including pages, at the end of the paper in the following standard forms:

For books:
Gaine, C (2006) We’re All White Thanks: the persisting myth about white schools. Stoke on Trent: Trentham

For articles:

For chapters

For online

End notes should be kept to a minimum. They should be numbered consecutively throughout the article, and should immediately precede the ‘References’ section.

Early Electronic Offprints: Corresponding authors can now receive their article by e-mail as a complete PDF. This allows the author to print up to 50 copies, free of charge, and disseminate them to colleagues. In many cases this facility will be available up to two weeks prior to publication, or alternatively a copy of the journal will be sent by post to all corresponding authors after publication.

Copyright. It is a condition of publication that authors assign copyright or license the publication rights in their articles, including abstracts, to Trentham Books Limited. This enables us to ensure full copyright protection and to disseminate the article to the widest possible readership in print and electronic formats as appropriate. Authors are themselves responsible for obtaining permission to reproduce copyright material from other sources.

This ninth issue of the Journal is deliberately is larger in content than earlier volumes because we wanted to bring together a number of themes and trends that have been emerging in previous issues with a particular focus on publishing some major research.

The first article is a summary of research undertaken by colleagues from Florida State and Florida Atlantic universities. It examines the application of the concept of ‘worldmindedness’ with over six hundred prospective teachers. Key to their findings was the relationship to broader a world view with a range of language skills, gender, international experience, studying courses with a global orientation, had a politically progressive viewpoint.

The second article by Annette Scheumpflug builds on earlier discussions in the Journal on teacher education and is based on a presentation given at Indiana University in Bloomington. Its main theme is the importance of competencies of global learning for teacher education. She reviews the debates on education and globalisation and makes explicit reference to the need to recognise different ways of seeing the world.

The third article by Sicong Chen, based on a presentation at an Institute of Education, University of London conference on Education in a Globalised World in 2010, develops the discussions in this Journal on concepts of global citizenship in relation to higher education and the impact of international experience. Using the Oxfam framework for Global Citizenship, it analyses Chinese students perceptions of being a global citizen based on a visit to a UK university. It raises some major issues regarding perceptions as to the perceived relationships between identity, motivation for studying abroad and being a global citizen.

The final article is by Hanna Alasuutari and summarises her current thinking around her doctoral research on global education in Finland. It compliments articles in earlier issues that reviewed policies and strategies in Wales, Austria, Norway and Canada. Central to her article is the need in policies and programmes in global education to incorporate critical literacy and ethical intercultural learning.

Emerging across these articles are a number of themes which the Journal is keen to continue to explore. They are:
– skills and knowledge to make sense of globalisation and they global society, particularly in terms of impact upon as individuals and our own experiences:

– recognition that perceptions about the wider world are influenced by a wide range of factors, social, cultural and economic. For example the articles from the United States and the one on Chinese students show contrasting but yet in some cases similar viewpoints about engagement with global questions.

– Continuing influence of policy-makers and the impact this has in terms of strategies and practices in and around development education and global learning.

Above all these articles demonstrate the importance and continuing need for more research and evidence on theme this Journal is committed to exploring.
